Dear Hiring Manager,

I am pleased to apply for a Learning Experience Design / Learning & Development role within your organization. With over 5 years of experience designing large-scale leadership and capability development initiatives across financial services and higher education, I specialize in building structured learning solutions that strengthen organizational performance and leadership pipelines.

In my current role as Manager – Learning and Development at Mahindra & Mahindra Financial Services, I design and deliver enterprise learning initiatives serving over 8,000 employees across multiple regions. My work includes developing blended learning journeys for field executives, creating managerial effectiveness programs across grade levels, and managing end-to-end leadership development initiatives, including senior executive programs. Through rigorous Training Needs Analysis and application of frameworks such as ADDIE, these initiatives have improved learner engagement, accelerated onboarding, and strengthened leadership readiness across the organization.

I have also contributed to organization-wide transformation initiatives, including programs focused on digital mindset and digital dexterity, as well as a company-wide Learning Week designed to promote continuous learning culture. My approach integrates instructor-led sessions, digital modules, gamified learning experiences, and AI-assisted content development to ensure both scalability and learner engagement.

Previously, I led the development of more than 60 interactive modules spanning functional, behavioral, and technical domains. In addition to instructional design, I have managed program budgets, coordinated external vendors, and worked closely with senior leaders to align learning interventions with strategic priorities. Direct interaction with executive stakeholders has strengthened my ability to translate complex business needs into practical capability-building solutions.

My background in higher education as an Assistant Professor, combined with a Master's degree in English and formal training in Learning Experience Design, has further shaped my strengths in curriculum development, facilitation, and learner-centered content creation.

I am particularly interested in contributing to international, innovation-driven organizations where learning supports digital transformation and long-term workforce development. I have intermediate German proficiency and am fully committed to further language development. I am open to relocation to Germany and eager to contribute within a global professional environment.

I would welcome the opportunity to discuss how my experience in leadership development, blended learning design, and large-scale program implementation can support your organization's goals. Thank you for your time and consideration.

Sincerely,
Eliza George
